

Workshop on Maritime Law

About the Event

An online workshop on Maritime (Admiralty) Law is being conducted by Lawctopus Law School in association with Delhi Management Association (DMA) on November 22nd and 23rd.

Why Learn Maritime Law?

Maritime law, also known as admiralty law, is a set of laws, international conventions, and treaties that govern maritime business such as shipping or offences occurring on open water.

As 90% of world trade is carried out by sea, everyone who is even remotely connected with law, international trade/port/customs, MBA students, exporters/importers, management of large corporations, etc. must have at least a working knowledge of Maritime Law.

It's important to have a fair idea of laws that govern the International movement of goods especially with ever-changing jurisdictions as a ship moves from one country to another.

About the Faculty

Capt Pankaj Kapoor joined Merchant Navy in 1980 and rose to become a Captain in 1993. Since then he has commanded various types and sizes of ships.

As a Maritime lawyer, he has been successfully involved in various cases involving International shipping contracts, salvage, and Maritime Labor Convention.

Under NITI AAYOG he has been instrumental in drafting India's NATIONAL MARITIME POLICY.

He is presently associated with a reputed law firm India Law Offices LLP as a Sr. Partner and also a member of Skill Development Council under DMA.

Please register in large numbers to get the benefit of this unique event.

All attendees will be earning a "Certificate of Attendance" from Lawctopus, DMA, & Capt. Pankaj Kapoor.
